Fraud alert: Scam targeting Native American Medicaid members

A scam is targeting Native American Medicaid members who need mental health or substance use treatment. Scammers pretend to be healthcare providers and offer false promises of help. At this time, there are no known occurrences of this scam in Idaho.

How the scam works

- Scammers approach people in public places like grocery stores, gas stations, or office buildings.
- They offer help with mental health treatment, rides, food, clothing, or even money to gain trust.
- Once they earn trust, they take people to fake treatment centers or sober homes.
- Some scammers even provide alcohol during the trip or at the fake treatment center.
- The scammers then bill for services not provided and steal other personal and medical information.

Warning signs of a fake treatment center

- Focuses on Native Americans going through addiction or homelessness.
- Offers free food, money, or gifts to convince people to go to treatment centers or sober homes.
- Provides little or no mental health or addiction treatment.
- Limits contact with family and community.
- Claims to support sobriety but gives alcohol instead.

Real treatment centers do not randomly approach people or make unexpected offers.

Protect yourself and others

This scam harms people and takes resources away from Native American communities. If you suspect fraud, report it right away. Call the Magellan member helpline at 1-855-202-0973.
